HUDSON RIVER FOUNDATION UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

The Foundation's Undergraduate Research Fellowship, in partnership with NYSDEC, is a paid summer program for Juniors and Seniors to get hands-on experience conducting research that addresses social and ecological challenges in the Hudson River watershed.

Apply if you:

- Are curious about the ecological conditions of the Hudson River, the species that live in it and how to restore and protect them.
- Want to better understand people's role in protecting the Hudson River ecosystem and watershed, including their barriers and motivations.
- Want to grow your skills in conducting research that has real-world impact.
- Have a faculty mentor or are planning to connect with a faculty mentor who can guide you throughout your research project.

What you'll gain:

- $8,000 stipend
- Experience developing and conducting impactful research
- Training to write a peer-reviewed manuscript
- Presentation and public speaking skills
- Mentor guidance
- Networking opportunities with environmental and social scientists
- Peer support from other fellows
